

How did Panama Flats get its name?

1 June 2020 / Saanich Archives

Skating on frozen floodplain, with Interurban rail line and Hyacinth Avenue visible in distance, between 1913-1923 (Saanich Archives, 1989-017-008)

A popular explanation, often repeated during the past few decades, is that Panama Flats was named by an Englishman named McDonald who was employed as Chief Engineer during the construction of the Panama Canal. Around 1904, he came to the Victoria area and invested his earnings in 1200 hectares of rural land. Because the swampy land and frequent flooding reminded McDonald of the jungles of Central America, he named the area Panama Flats. This is an engaging origin story but no evidence could be found to support it, while quite a bit of contradictory information was discovered.

The first problem with this account is the amount of land that Mr. McDonald was supposed to have purchased. 1200 hectares is equivalent to 2965 acres. For comparison, Kenneth McKenzie's Lake Hill Estate, which from the 1860s until the early 1890s consisted of all of Victoria Land District Sections 48, 50, 64, and 82, was at its maximum only about 850 acres. Factoring in the other well-documented land owners of the area during the late 19th and early 20th century, and the fact that during the first decade of the 20th century much of the surrounding area was being subdivided into smaller acreages, the idea that McDonald owned nearly 3000 acres is unlikely.

The next inconsistency with this version is the presence of Joseph Carey, after whom Carey Road is named. According to tax assessment ledgers from 1889 to 1906, Carey owned all 111 acres of Lake District Section 12 which encompasses half of Panama Flats and all of today's Panama Hill Park.

Detail of Saanich land districts and sections surrounding Panama Flats, 2020 (saanich.ca/saanichmap)

Since we know that landowners such as Carey and McKenzie owned large sections of the Flats and surrounding areas, perhaps the account of McDonald is true but the amount of land he purchased was recorded incorrectly. This is plausible except that no record of a landowner named McDonald or MacDonald was found in this area during this period. There are no McDonalds in the tax assessment ledgers or the directories. The only reference to a MacDonald uncovered so far is a Henry Alexander MacDonald in the 1908 Saanich voters list. He is described as a farmer living on Carey Road. He is not included in the 1909 voters list though, and is not present in the 1908 city directory. A 70 year old retired steel worker named Henry Alexander McDonald died in Victoria in 1950. This may be the same MacDonald who was living on Carey Road in 1908, but it is unlikely that he was the wealthy English engineer and landowner in the Panama Flats story.

Another point worth considering is how the history of the Panama Canal construction fits into the timeline. One account, published in the Times Colonist in 1983 says that around 1904, McDonald used “one of the $100,000 increments he received while the canal was being dug” to purchase his 1200 hectares in Saanich. 1904 is the year that the United States took over the Panama Canal project from the French, who had begun work in 1881. While it is possible that an Englishman was employed on the Panama Canal during this period, $100,000 seems like a large sum of money for a project that was sold to the United States in part due to consistent financial problems.

While no reference to an engineer named McDonald working on the Panama Canal prior to 1904 has been uncovered, there was someone named MacDonald recorded as working and living in Panama after 1904. According to a 1993 article published in the Canadian Geotechnical Journal, the Geological Survey relocated a young geologist on their staff, Donald MacDonald, to reside in Panama for the duration of the canal project in order to help manage the frequent landslides disrupting construction. Donald MacDonald did not join the project until 1911 though, seven years after our McDonald is supposed to have returned from Panama to purchase land in Saanich. So again, this does not fit with the timeline of our narrative. Donald MacDonald also does not appear to have had any connection to Vancouver Island. He was born in Nova Scotia, lived and worked in various cities in the United States and Nova Scotia, and is buried with his wife's family in Kentucky.

Doris Clarke, who was born in 1909 and grew up on Grange Road, overlooking the "grazing fields", has another account of the area that is now Panama Flats. She remembers being told that the area was originally two farms. The northern part, known as Carey farm, was owned by Joseph Carey and the southern part was owned by Captain Warren. Mrs. Clark recounts that sometime later (possibly around the time of Carey's death in 1910), George Jones took over both farms. Between 1912 and 1914, a German bought both farms for $1000 per acre, subdivided and sold lots. She recollects that some houses were built on the flats but later flooded out. When WWI came, the German's property was seized by the Government and John Edge bought the farm in 1924. The Edge family are well documented as having farmed the fields around Panama Flats until the 1970s.

Edge's barn and flooding of Panama Flats, December 1972 (Saanich Archives, 1982-001-028)

We don't know who first told the story of McDonald giving Panama Flats its name, but it has been shared in the local newspapers since as early as 1983. According to a 1996 Times Colonist article, the Saanich archivist "dug up a historical account of the flats" but no such account has been located in the Archives' collections.

Here's what we have learned about the origin of the place name Panama Flats:

The first use of the word Panama in relation to this land area in the Colonist is in a series of advertisements published throughout June 1912 for the sale of residential lots in "Panama Park". In a 1975 Times Colonist Article, Jim Osman writes that around 1910, a developer was intending to develop the Garden City area and that "a large swamp was to be called Panama Park". This version of the history seems to attribute the name to the developers and fits with the timeline of the first appearance of these ads, but again we don't know the source of this information. According to Jim Osman, the 1910s era development of Panama Park was short-lived due to constant flooding.

YOUR LAST OPPORTUNITY

To Buy City Lots at Small-Town Prices

Victoria has struck the note of her last chance for a probably growing of a city right into the very heart of the Pacific Coast. Property values have been keeping with the development of the city and it is consequently difficult to secure desirable lots for home building without paying a good stiff price. "Panama Park," situated within the three and a half mile circle, offers what we believe will be the last opportunity to secure building property of this character at the prices we are making and at such unusual terms.

Tenants and Investors

Each here a chance worth considering well in "Panama Park." The houses are under the hands of a fortunate contractor, beautifully situated and convenient to build on. For a few hundred dollars, by paying down $25 and $10 a month, hands will turn, work on them, and soon be ready to rent. Furthermore, this property will steadily increase in value. The investor finds in one after a big opportunity. This amount of capital required to build and when one considers that in Vancouver, where it will never come as large as Victoria, one in a year the value now selling at $2500, cannot with reason be sold in "Panama Park," $250.00 can scarcely get the greater right through it, and about improvements etc., under one, when land has been purchased at these prices and terms, the value of the investment is approximately 100 per cent.

Buy Now at These Prices

Clear, Level and Sloping Lots PANAMA PARK On the New Car Line

No Lot Less Than 50 x 120

$250 to $450 Per Lot

A Few Lots at $200; Also Some One-Third Acres at $500 to $700

$25 CASH and $10 PER MONTH

Consider These Important Facts

The F. C. Sturgess has already completed the work of grading through "Panama Park" paths are up and connecting with the city.

Every per cent of the entire property has been under cultivation.

Each lot is fully equipped in soil of various kinds, being rich, elevated lots, having lots, full with soil grass and trees, lots with water trees, chestnut, and other plants.

Every street and by-paths completely will be laid through the property during the next few weeks without any cost to the purchaser. Graded for paving.

Sublet and water of the low tide will be directly under water.

Clear light and excellent view of land, the water directly on adjacent streets.

Face almost building.

Don't Just Think About It; Act at Once

Immediately you see groups of lots please the owner of this offer. Why go on thinking you can buy $250 and $100 a lot when you have this opportunity now with the business conditions sure to be given in other cities for the next few days.

COME TO ENQUIRY. WE WILL BE OPEN ALL DAY AND WE SHALL BE GLAD TO SHOW THE FULL OFFICIAL MAP AND TELL YOU ALL ABOUT THE OPPORTUNITIES. WE CAN GIVE YOU OUR OFFICE. 1200 BROADWAY, SUITE 1000 (NEAR BROAD STREET), SUITE 1000, VICTORIA, B.C.

F. STURGESS & CO.

110 PENDERBEN BLOCK - Phone 200
OPEN ALL DAY WEEKEND - Evening 7:30

30 Per Cent of "Panama Park" Bought After One Week's Advertising, and Houses Are Already Going Up. Construction Work on Streets and Sidewalks Now Under Way

PANAMA PARK

Big Lots ready to build on.

Splendid views.

Situated on the new Saanich electric car line.

You will never again have such a chance as this to buy city lots at small town prices.

Values have already advanced since selling began.

Adjacent acreage is selling at $2,000 an acre in large blocks.

None of Those Who Have Bought Would Sell Now for Less Than $100 More Than What He Paid, and Everyone is Thoroughly Satisfied. There Are Still a Number of Beautiful Locations at Original Prices, but Every Day Some Them Grow Fewer. Your Best Move is to Act at Once, Come in and

Pick Your Lot

IN BEAUTIFUL VARIETATED

PANAMA PARK

PER $250 to $450 LOT

On Terms of $25 Down and $10 per Month

Use This Coupon to Obtain Full Description of "Panama Park," or Call at the Office and We Will Supply You, Free of all Obligation on Your Part.

PANAMA PARK

Some distance from heart of Victoria as Oak Bay.

Near churches and schools.

This is your chance if you want to own a home in beautiful fast-growing Victoria, at an easy price on very easy terms.

Houses to property hourly from the Penderben Block, beginning at 9 a.m. Come out with us tomorrow.

F. Sturgess & Co.

Phone - Box 2339
Box 23147
110 Penderben Block
Victoria, B.C.

The Victoria Colonist 2 June 1912, page 16 / The Victoria Colonist 9 June 1912, page 41

While no record of an Englishman named McDonald purchasing 1200 hectares in Saanich at the turn of the 20th century has been uncovered at this time, the story of how Panama Flats got its name was not necessarily pure invention. The building of the Panama Canal was regularly covered in newspapers at the time and many businesses tried to capitalize on its popularity by using Panama in their name. In 1912, in addition to the new Panama Park development in Saanich, there was a Panama Hotel and Restaurant and a Panama Realty Company operating downtown. Panama was in the public consciousness at this time and the comparison between the swampy landscape in Saanich and the jungles of Panama could have been made by anyone reading a newspaper, not only by someone who had visited in person. The land records at Saanich Archives are not complete, so it is possible that a man named McDonald lived or owned land in the area and that his name became connected to the origin of Panama Flats. Due to the incomplete nature of the historical record, we may never find the definitive answer to how Panama Flats got its name.

Panama Flats, looking west, January 1963 (Saanich Archives, 2015-014-004)

Sources:

BC Archives, Genealogy indexes, "Death certificate of Henry Alexander McDonald," 17 Feb 1950.

British Colonist online edition, various issues 1912, <http://www.britishcolonist.ca/>.

British Columbia City Directories, <https://bccd.vpl.ca/>.

Legett, Robert F, "Donald MacDonald and the Panama Canal," Canadian Geotechnical Journal, 30, no.4 (August 1993): 555, <https://www.nrcresearchpress.com/toc/cgj/30/4>.

Saanich Archives, Assessment rolls, 1895-1906.

Saanich Archives, Reference Files, "Early Landowners by Section."

Saanich Archives, Vertical Files, "Edge, John."

Saanich Archives, Vertical Files, "Panama Flats."

Doris Clarke, handwritten memoir, 7 April 2016.

Jim Osman, Times Colonist, "The Road Back," 6 Apr 1975.

"Facts on the Flats," Times Colonist, 2 Oct 1996, A3.

Times Colonist, 16 May 1983.

Saanich Archives, Voters lists, 1908-1909.